What is a Pigment Ink Print?

Today, artists commonly use the term to describe a fine art print produced by the inkjet printing method. A pigment ink print is made with a highly sophisticated inkjet printer using long lasting archival pigment inksets and stable media. Our inks have been tested and should produce a print with a longevity of 100+ years, under ideal conditions.

Capture

In order to make a print, we need to get your image into a computer. There are several ways to do this, including direct scanning, digital image capture, and scanning from a transparency. Whichever method you choose, the quality of the end product is determined at this step. Captures of artwork up to 30x40 are $75. Large captures by quote.

Color

In addition to good color management practices, our technicians also use a great amount of skill and judgement to get great color. It's important to keep in mind that a giclee is a reproduction, and will not match an original 100%. This said, we think you'll be very happy with the results and keep your expenses reasonable by exercising restraint when judging and adjusting color.

Proofs

We are happy to provide proofs of your work before making the actual prints. Proofs include an 8x10 of the entire image, as well as a small strip at full magnification. The price is $25 per proof, plus postage. Overall color adjustments may be made at a cost of a new proof. Specific color adjustments are made at a price of $75 /hr, plus a new proof.

Canvas Wraps

There are two popular wrap styles available to you.
1. Museum wraps- these have a clean white or colored edge covering the sides of the stretcher, with no visible staples. No charge for this.

2. Gallery wraps- these have the edges of the image cloned and flipped to carry around the sides of the stretcher and around the back. Charge for this is $15 per original.
